

principia mission

SCHOOLS CONFERENCE

2 November 2016: University of Portsmouth

5 November 2016: University of York

Has Tim Peake's Principia Mission inspired you?

- The UK Space Agency is organising two conferences for school pupils, to give young people the opportunity to showcase their work linked to Tim Peake's Principia mission.
- Each one-day conference will include keynote talks from leading figures, presentations from the students to leading experts from industry and education, and an exhibition of students' work.
- British ESA astronaut Tim Peake will be in attendance at both events, if his schedule allows.
- Each University will also be hosting an accompanying day of workshops and talks for participants.
- The conferences will be free of charge, with travel bursaries available to help schools with the cost of travelling to the venues.

www.principia.org.uk/schools-conferences

Applications close at 12 noon 15 September 2016

How to apply

- Individuals or groups of young people of school age are able to apply and present or exhibit their work by submitting short accounts or write-ups of their project(s) or work.
- Applications should explain to the judging panel what the young people have done, why they should come to a conference, and what they would present at the conference.
- Applications can take any physical form (including written, oral, video, artwork, models, photographs etc.).
- There is no limit on the size of group that submit an application (it could be an individual, a small group, an extracurricular group, a class, a whole school etc.), but if the application is successful, a maximum of six children who represent the group along with up to two accompanying adults will be invited to attend one of the conferences.
- Applications to attend are invited from any individual, or groups of people of school age (up to and including A-Levels, Scottish Highers, BTECs and similar).
- The application process will be competitive, with places allocated by a judging panel looking for those projects that show dedication to the work.
- Applications can either be submitted online or via post. In either case, the online application form must be completed.

Full details can be found on

www.principia.org.uk/schools-conferences

Applications close at 12 noon 15 September 2016